WARNING: Inherent Risks on Agritourism

Under Minnesota Law, a provider of agritourism activities is not liable for injury, damage, or death of the participant resulting from an inherent risk of agritourism. Inherent risks include: natural hazards and conditions of land, water and vegetation; behavior of wild, domestic, and farm animals; ordinary dangers of farm, ranch processing and other machinery, equipment and structures; and, other dangers of conditions integral to an agritourism activity. Participants assume the inherent risks of agritourism activities.
